Leadership

The Brain Aneurysm Foundation is fortunate to have a Medical Advisory Board composed of neurologists, neurosurgeons, interventional neuroradiologists, and other brain aneurysm specialists from leading medical centers around the globe. We are privileged to have their continued expertise and support, and are grateful for their time and dedication.

The Brain Aneurysm Foundation is also grateful for the service of our Board Members and Executive Committee. The members of these groups give very generously of their time, talents, and expertise to help the foundation fulfill its mission.

A Word From

The Executive Director

As you will read in this Annual Report, 2017 was a period of phenomenal progress and promise, thanks in great part to the dedication and determination of you, our passionate supporters. You should be proud of what we have accomplished together, and confident that we will achieve even more in the years ahead. There's no stopping us!

Last year saw a number of exciting new initiatives and achievements, many of which are described on the following pages.

One of the most exciting was our first statewide Brain Aneurysm Awareness Day at the Massachusetts State House during Brain Aneurysm Awareness Month in September. With your help, our goal is to hold Brain Aneurysm Awareness Days in all 50 states in the coming years.

Last year, we held our first scientific session during our annual Research Symposium, and distributed $445,000 in grants to 14 researchers, whose photos adorn our cover. Funded entirely by donations, this was the largest amount ever awarded by the Brain Aneurysm Foundation!

Also, we welcomed Boston Bruins defenseman Kevan Miller as our first national spokesperson, and held our first annual Champion Awards event in Boston, which was replicated in New York state and perhaps will be held elsewhere in 2018.

We also welcomed new members to our Board of Directors (Jeffrey B. Harvey) and our Medical Advisory Board (Drs. Stanley Berman and Edward R. Smith), further adding to the deep expertise of these dedicated groups of volunteers.

These are just some of the many highlights of 2017. I hope you enjoy reading about how together we are making a difference and moving ever closer to a world without death or disability from brain aneurysms.

With deep appreciation for all you do,

Christine Buckley

The Medical Advisory Board Executive Director

The 14 women and men on the cover of this annual report are researchers whose work may change the future for people with a brain aneurysm. Their research ranges from discovering the genetic causes of brain aneurysms, developing novel ways to diagnose brain aneurysms early, determining which patients with an unruptured aneurysm need treatment, reducing brain injury following rupture, and evaluating the effectiveness of new therapies.

All of them are able to pursue their important work because of you, our dedicated and determined supporters, who give so generously of your time and resources. Thanks to you, this year we were able to award research grants totaling $445,000 — the largest amount ever awarded by the foundation and 43 percent more than last year! — to these deserving researchers.

Since its inception, the foundation has distributed more than $2.1 million in research grants, making us the largest private funder of brain aneurysm research in the United States. We are also pleased to report that in 2017, seven new BAF Chairs of Research, which are established with a gift of $10,000 or greater, were created.

Whether you organized or took part in a local awareness-raising event, established a Chair of Research, or joined us in Washington for our annual Advocacy Day, we are extremely grateful for your support. Thanks to you, we are making steady progress toward our shared goal of reducing deaths and disabilities from brain aneurysms.

Financial Summary

Since 1994, when the Brain Aneurysm Foundation was established as a public charity, our funding has been targeted to provide critical awareness, education, support, advocacy, and research funding to reduce the incidence of brain aneurysms, promote early detection, and improve patient outcomes.

The foundation has no endowment; every dollar we raise is deployed to advance our mission to create wider awareness of brain aneurysms; to provide support for those affected by brain aneurysms; and to educate patients, their families, and the medical community about brain aneurysms. From year to year, the foundation strives to maintain its low overhead through vigilant governance of expenses and constant review of nonprofit best practices and methodologies.

Each year, the Brain Aneurysm Foundation awards grants for research focused on early detection, improved treatments, and technological advances that will ultimately improve the outcomes for patients with brain aneurysms

In 2017, the Brain Aneurysm Foundation awarded $445,000 in research grants to 14 recipients, the largest amount awarded in one year to date. Since its inception, the foundation — the largest private funder of brain aneurysm research in the nation — has distributed more than $2.1 million in research grants.

The Research Grant Committee is led by the foundation's Medical Advisory Board president Robert Rosenwasser, MD, of Thomas Jefferson University Hospital. The committee reviews all grant applications to identify those of the greatest merit that align with the foundation's mission.

Education and Awareness

The Brain Aneurysm Foundation provides current, accurate information about brain aneurysms, treatment options, and recovery to patients and families, healthcare professionals, and the general public. Whatever the question or concern, people throughout the world turn to the Brain Aneurysm Foundation for reliable answers and information.

Through our active presence on social media, we also raise awareness about brain aneurysms, with the goal of educating the public about symptoms and risk factors and generating support for federal policies and funding that will benefit those affected by brain aneurysms.

In 2017, we further increased awareness by welcoming Boston Bruins defenseman Kevan Miller as our first national spokesperson. We also hosted an event at the Massachusetts State House during Brain Aneurysm Awareness Month in September, which culminated with landmarks across the state being illuminated in red throughout the evening. Our goal is to hold similar events in many other states across the nation in the coming years.

Massachusetts survivor Tom Tinlin, a Brain Aneurysm Foundation volunteer

That is how Massachusetts resident Tom Tinlin describes what it felt like when his brain aneurysm ruptured in April 2017. Just days earlier, the married father of two and then-administrator for the Highway Division of the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, had been told by his primary care doctor that his persistent, painful headaches were probably due to stress. Accustomed to a high-stress job, Tom was doubtful, but trusted his doctor.

Fortunately, Tom's wife, Heather, was with him when the aneurysm ruptured and was able to rush him to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, where he received lifesaving treatment. After 12 days in the hospital, Tom went home. His recovery has been steady and smooth, in part because of his sense of humor, support from family and friends, and realistic expectations.

As someone who has always volunteered and wants to continue to make a difference, Tom has been helping the Brain Aneurysm Foundation raise awareness so that perhaps others will be spared what he and his family endured.

For instance, Tom played a major role in the successful Brain Aneurysm Awareness Month event held at the Massachusetts State House last September, and also helped get awareness billboards placed on Massachusetts highways. Tom continues to be a valued supporter of the foundation, and in March 2018 received a BAF Champions Award for his many contributions.

“It frustrates me that my experience was avoidable, had my primary care doctor been more aware of the symptoms of a brain aneurysm,” says Tom. “My hope is that we can educate more healthcare professionals and the public about brain aneurysms so that fewer people have to suffer or die.”

Sharon Epperson: Why I Support the BAF

On a September morning in 2016, Sharon Epperson was participating in an exercise class when she felt a strange sensation in her head. Almost instantly “I knew something was wrong” says Sharon, a CNBC correspondent and married mother of two who lives in Westchester County, New York.

Unable to drive, Sharon called her husband, who picked her up and took her to a primary care physician, who insisted they go to the local Emergency Department. There, tests revealed that Sharon had suffered a ruptured brain aneurysm. She was transferred to Montefiore Medical Center, where she underwent surgical treatment.

One year following her treatment, Sharon was happy to be able to return to work. But she is the first to admit that she is a changed person. “In the past I was always very driven toward a future goal, but now I live in the moment and relish the fact that I’m alive.”

Sharon’s recovery, which she says is “still ongoing and may never be 100 percent,” has not been easy. “I used to go at 120 percent and just power through if I got tired, but now I may hit the wall at 80 percent and I don’t have a second wind, so I need to pace myself,” says Sharon. “It’s a challenge if you’re not used to saying no, and often difficult for others to understand because this cognitive fatigue is invisible.”

One activity Sharon always makes time for these days is raising awareness about brain aneurysms and the need for more research. In a recent conversation, she shared some of the reasons she is so passionate about the Brain Aneurysm Foundation’s mission.

How did you first learn about the Brain Aneurysm Foundation?

After my treatment, I wanted to learn more about the incidence of brain aneurysms and aneurysm ruptures among African-Americans and did a Google search, which led me to the BAF website. There I found out that women are more likely than men to suffer an aneurysm and that African-Americans are twice as likely as whites to have a rupture. I was very impressed with the information on the BAF website, which I found enormously helpful. I did some research [on GuideStar and Charity Navigator] and learned that the BAF is a transparent, fiscally responsible organization with a prestigious Medical Advisory Board and professional leadership. As a longtime financial journalist, it was important to me to know that I was supporting an organization that meets these criteria.

Have you taken advantage of any of the services offered by the BAF?

Yes. On the website, I found out about a BAF-approved support group in my area. The support group helps me in so many ways. It gives me comfort to realize I’m not alone and that other survivors are also affected by the issues that affect me. The group reminds me to be grateful; I can see that some people are having a much more difficult recovery. The group also helped me deal with issues related to returning to work. The support group is a place where I can feel open, honest, and just be me.

Sharon Epperson, Senior Personal Finance Correspondent for CNBC

You have generously funded a Sharon Epperson BAF Chair of Research, which will provide funds for a researcher. Why is brain aneurysm research so important to you?

Research funding of brain aneurysms pales in comparison to the funding of diseases with similar prevalence and death rates, partly because of a lack of awareness. In particular, the research of brain aneurysms among African-Americans — who are disproportionately affected — is sparse and outdated. I am passionate about supporting research looking at the early detection of brain aneurysms, particularly among women and people of color, which could save many lives.

You participated with your family in the TeamCindy 5K Run for Research in New York City last September, raising $13,000 for the BAF through your efforts. And you attended the BAF Advocacy Day in Washington, DC in March. Why did you decide to participate in these events?

A friend put me in touch with Elaine Schaller, a BAF board member who coordinates the TeamCindy 5K Run for Research, a successful and fun event that honors her daughter, Cindy, who died from a ruptured brain aneurysm in 2007 when she was only 33. Elaine and I have a shared passion for raising awareness, so I decided to participate in the run. It was a wonderful day, and it was so great to talk to other survivors at the event.

I chose to participate in the BAF Advocacy Day as it’s critically important to educate legislators at the national level about brain aneurysms so they will support brain aneurysm research and policies that will improve the lives of survivors and caregivers.

Advocacy

Raising awareness among state and federal legislators about brain aneurysms and advocating for increased brain aneurysm research funding and policies that help patients and families is an important part of our mission. We have made significant strides, and will continue to work hard for patients and families until we achieve all of our goals.

On March 29, 2017, the Brain Aneurysm Foundation led a delegation of 123 people from 18 states to meet with legislators on Capitol Hill for our 6th annual Congressional Advocacy Day on Capitol Hill.

This was the largest turnout to date, demonstrating the growing commitment among those impacted by brain aneurysms to advocate for policies aimed at improving and saving lives. The delegation included survivors and caregivers, family members who lost loved ones to brain aneurysms, healthcare professionals, foundation board members, and BAF corporate partners.

The busy day, during which delegation members met with 200 legislators, helped raise awareness of brain aneurysms and encourage support of Ellie's Law (H. Res. 1648), named for Ellie Helton, a teenager who died of a brain aneurysm. This bill would provide $25 million ($5 million per year over five years) in federal funding for brain aneurysm research.

The foundation thanks everyone who participated, with a special nod to its pro bono government affairs counsel Arnold & Porter for helping make Advocacy Day a success.

“As a neurosurgeon, I care for patients and families who have been affected by aneurysms every day. I have seen the trauma and heartache they can cause. I am inspired by the courage that these patients and families demonstrate, and want to continue this fight in the research domain as well as in the clinical arena.”

“The Brain Aneurysm Foundation is the most prominent, well-respected organization that advocates on behalf of people with brain aneurysms. Brain aneurysm research is relatively underfunded. The foundation seeks to remedy this by increasing public awareness and providing much-needed seed funding for basic research, which is essential for making progress in the field.”

“Through our research, we are hoping that one day we can clearly tell which patients with aneurysms are at high risk for aneurysm rupture. We are hoping that we can use drugs, instead of endovascular or open surgeries, to prevent the rupture of aneurysms.”

“If our research findings [on the neuro-protective role of progesterone] translate to patients, this treatment could be tested in a clinical trial. I care for many patients suffering from this disease and I know that through research, there is a lot more that can be done to improve their outcomes.”

“The goal of our research [in collaboration with BAF grant recipient Aichi Chien, PhD, of UCLA] is to better understand which aneurysms are at risk of growth and ultimately rupture that require treatment compared to those that are at less risk of growth and may be better for a ‘watch and wait’ approach to avoid complications due to treatment.”

“We are hoping to answer the question, ‘Who has a brain aneurysm?’
Our research focuses on finding biomarkers in blood that will indicate if a person has an unruptured brain aneurysm and needs to receive imaging. Using this paradigm we hope to help at-risk individuals discover if they have an aneurysm so they can receive lifesaving treatment.”

“We are trying to find the genes that cause familial brain aneurysms. If we find specific mutations in specific families, we will be able to predict who is at risk and who is not, thereby enabling closer monitoring of at-risk family members and offering reassurance to unaffected family members.”

“Our research is aimed at improving outcomes in survivors of ruptured brain aneurysms. In particular, we are trying to understand why patients who look well after surgically fixing an aneurysm go on to have progressive brain injury and functional decline. This is one of the major questions in the field of neurocritical care.”

“The BAF supports impactful research for a disease that often goes under the radar. BAF funding provides research groups with critical seed funding to develop research projects that can go on to receive federal funding or interest from the private space.”
